

We are pleased to announce that Paul Milana, AIA, has joined Hart Howerton as Principal in our New York office.

Together with our senior leadership across the globe, Paul will help strengthen the firm's design, planning and development strategy services. His extensive experience in architecture, planning and urban design includes the resort community of WaterColor in Florida; East Edisto, a 78,000-acre regional master plan in South Carolina; real estate strategies for land assets of the University of Texas System; the transit-oriented redevelopment of Bay Meadows Racetrack in San Mateo, California; a corporate headquarters building in Celebration, Florida; and new developments in Mexico, Brazil, Russia and the Czech Republic.

“I am excited about joining one of the world's premier architecture, planning and landscape architecture firms. My past experiences with acclaimed community plans, urban infill, diverse architecture and urban design for private developers, institutions and public agencies, both domestically and abroad, provides further depth to an already accomplished team of design leaders at Hart Howerton. I look forward to being an integral part of the firm's continued excellence.”
